

As a New Yorker, I find it disgusting that the FCC seems to be trying to use the World Trade Center Distaster as a smokescreen to glide in de-regulation legislation under the public radar. Media de-regulation is a cancer which is sucking the life out of the freedoms this country was founded on; namely, the freedom of speech and freedom of ideas.

Simply put, there should be no further de-regulation of the telecommunications industry, and don't you dare use, as Michael Powell did, the tragedy of 9/11 to justify your actions one bit.

Sincerely,
David Liam Moran
davidm@shakespeare-nyc.com